

Dr. Heather Hanson

Heather Hanson, PhD, is a gerontological researcher. She frequently works in integrated knowledge translation teams to conduct applied health research.

Her interest is mobility among older adults, including the maintenance of mobility through physical activity, health promotion decision-making, and the prevention of falls.

In her role as ASD, she supports the conduct of research aligned with the SCN and facilitates interdisciplinary collaboration in health and aging research across the province.